Measure 216 project example: Restoration of dry-stone wall landscape features in Estonia’s Matsalu National Park, Estonia

Estonia’s Matsalu National Park is a valuable natural heritage asset and the authorities are interested in restoring its landscape features for future generations to enjoy. They planned an EAFRD supported project focused on repairing dry-stone walls as traditional socio-cultural landscape features of the Park. It is to be added the ecological value of the stone walls as they offer valuable habitats for amphibians, reptiles, small mammals and birds.

The project’s activities consisted in restoration works. As the conservation of these historically important landscape features requires special technical skills a contract was awarded to a specialist to re-construct the 220 meters of dry-stone walls to their original condition. So maintaining traditional rural skills was added to the project benefits, besides improving the Park’s overall attractiveness as a rural tourism destination for the local economy.

The total cost of the project was €5,900, out of which €4,720 was EAFRD contribution.
